1 Executive Summary

Article 19A of Pakistan’s Constitution guarantees all citizens the right to access information held by public institutions, subject to certain legal exceptions. This constitutional right is reinforced by the federal Right of Access to Information Act (RTI), 2017. In alignment with constitutional requirements, all provinces have enacted similar legislation on the subject. Section 5 of the federal RTI Act mandates federal public bodies to proactively publish specified categories of information and records on their websites within six months of the Act’s enactment.

The Free and Fair Election Network (FAFEN) conducted an assessment of federal public bodies’ compliance with the RTI Act, 2017 by evaluating their official websites for the required disclosures. Despite more than seven years since the Act’s enactment, the findings indicate inconsistent compliance across federal public bodies. On average, only 40% of the required information is available on the official websites of 40 divisions across 33 federal ministries, based on a comprehensive and standardized methodology.¹

FAFEN’s assessment evaluated the availability and accessibility of information categories required by the RTI Act. These categories include an overview of public bodies, public services and conditions, personnel information, legal frameworks and policies, decision-making and financial information, access to information, reports and investigations, and communication and response time.

A division-wise analysis revealed significant variations in compliance. The Cabinet Division and the Inter-Provincial Coordination Division ranked highest, achieving a compliance rate of 42% with Section 5 of the RTI Act. Fifteen divisions fell within the compliance range of 31% to 40%. Among these, six divisions — Establishment, Petroleum, National Heritage and Culture, Revenue, Interior, and Planning, Development, and Special Initiatives — achieved 38% compliance each. Another seven divisions — Commerce, Communications, Federal Education and Professional Training, Foreign Affairs, Privatization, Religious Affairs and Interfaith Harmony, and Water Resources — reported 35% compliance each. The Climate Change and Information Technology and Telecommunication Divisions had the lowest compliance in this group at 31%.

BACKGROUND

Easy and equitable access to information about public bodies is a cornerstone for building public trust in government institutions. Transparency not only empowers citizens with accurate and timely information, but also serves as a safeguard against misinformation, which often leads to confusion, polarization, and social unrest. In the absence of readily accessible and reliable information, citizens often turn to unofficial sources, amplifying the risk of false narratives gaining traction. Moreover, limited transparency creates opportunities for corruption, as citizens may resort to informal channels to obtain information or services – practices that perpetuate bribery, exploitation, and systemic inefficiencies.

Accountability of public bodies becomes significantly more effective when relevant information is readily accessible to citizens. In the digital age, with over 111 million Pakistanis having internet access (as of 2024)¹, online platforms present a cost-effective and efficient alternative to traditional information dissemination methods. Countries across South Asia, including India and Bangladesh, have successfully harnessed digital platforms to enhance transparency by making public information easily accessible.

Thirteen divisions fell into the 21% to 30% compliance category. Within this range, Aviation, Defence, Defence Production, Economic Affairs, Power, Human Rights, Law and Justice, Parliamentary Affairs, Railways, and Science and Technology divisions each achieved 27% compliance. Meanwhile, the Finance, Industries and Production, and National Food Security and Research divisions reported a compliance rate of 23%.

Nine divisions were categorized as having compliance rates between 11% and 20%. Of these, six divisions — Housing and Works, Information and Broadcasting, Ports and Shipping, Narcotics Control, National Health Services, Regulations and Coordination, and Overseas Pakistanis and Human Resource Development — reported 19% compliance each. The National Security, Kashmir Affairs and Gilgit-Baltistan, and States and Frontier divisions each achieved 15%. The Poverty Alleviation and Social Safety Division ranked the lowest, with just 8% of the legally-required information available on its website.

Following the website assessment, FAFEN filed RTI requests with 33 federal ministries to obtain information. Of these, 19 ministries responded, while 14 ministries did not provide any information. Among the responses, only nine ministries (27%) provided the requested information within the stipulated 10 working days. However, 10 ministries (30%) provided the information after the legally-required timeframe. The remaining 14 ministries have yet to provide the requested information.

Several countries in the region have enacted the right to information legislation, empowering citizens to freely access public data and reinforcing their role in holding institutions accountable. Pakistan joined these efforts with the enactment of the Right of Access to Information Act, 2017, which mandates federal public bodies to make their information available to the public. Following the 18th Constitutional Amendment, the provinces have adopted their own right-to-information laws, further reinforcing the importance of transparency at the federal and provincial levels. These legislative measures aim to promote a culture of accountability, empowering citizens to actively engage in governance and contribute to more transparent and responsive institutions.

2 Findings of Federal Ministries' Compliance with the Right of Access to Information Act, 2017

FAFEN monitored a total of 40 websites from 33 federal ministries' divisions to assess their compliance with the Right of Access to Information Act, 2017. Below is a detailed analysis of the level of compliance by federal public bodies across the key information categories mandated by the law to provide on their websites. (These categories are elaborated in Figure-1).

For a comprehensive overview, Annexure 1 provides a detailed list of the federal ministries' divisions whose websites were reviewed during this assessment.

1. Disclosure of Overview of Public Bodies

To promote transparency, accountability, and citizens' trust, it is mandatory for public bodies to display basic organizational information on their websites. This includes details about their organizational structure, functions, powers, and duties. The Right of Access to Information Act, 2017 enforces this requirement to ensure easy access for citizens.

For a detailed compliance checklist of divisions' websites against this requirement, refer to Annexure 2.

Organization’s Information

The websites of 33 out of 40 (83%) divisions have detailed information about the organization. The websites for the National Security, Poverty Alleviation and Social Safety, Human Rights, Information and Broadcasting, Narcotics Control, National Health Services, Regulations and Coordination and Water Resource divisions lack such organizational details.

Functions of Public Bodies

The websites of 29 out of 40 (73%) divisions have functions outlined for the access of citizens. However, Poverty Alleviation and Social Safety, Revenue, Information and Broadcasting, Interior, Law and Justice, Ports and Shipping, Narcotics Control, National Health Services, Regulations and Coordination, Planning, Development and Special Initiatives, Railways and States and Frontier Regions divisions lack this information.

Powers of Public Bodies

Only cabinet division has provided this information on its website, while the remaining 39 (98%) public bodies do not provide this information for public access.

Duties of Public Bodies

Only four public bodies have made information about their duties on their websites, including the Cabinet, Climate Change, Commerce, and Revenue divisions.

2. Disclosure of Public Services and Conditions

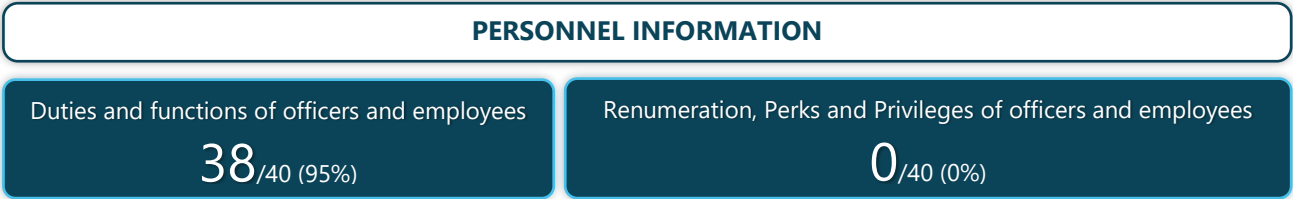

Section 5(a) of the Rights to Access of Information Act, 2017 requires all public bodies to share details of the services they provide to public through their websites. A review of the websites reveals that only two divisions – Economic Affairs and Foreign Affairs – have complied with this requirement, while the remaining 38 divisions have not made this information accessible to citizens. For details, please see Annexure-3.

3. Disclosure of Personnel Information

Section 5(a) of the Rights of Access to Information Act, 2017 requires public bodies to disclose the information about the duties, functions, remuneration, perks, and privileges of their officers and employees on their websites. The assessment revealed that 38 out of 40 divisions have provided the information about the duties and functions of officers and employees. However, none of the divisions disclosed information regarding the remuneration, perks, and privileges of their officers and employees.

For the compliance checklist on this category, refer to Annexure 4.

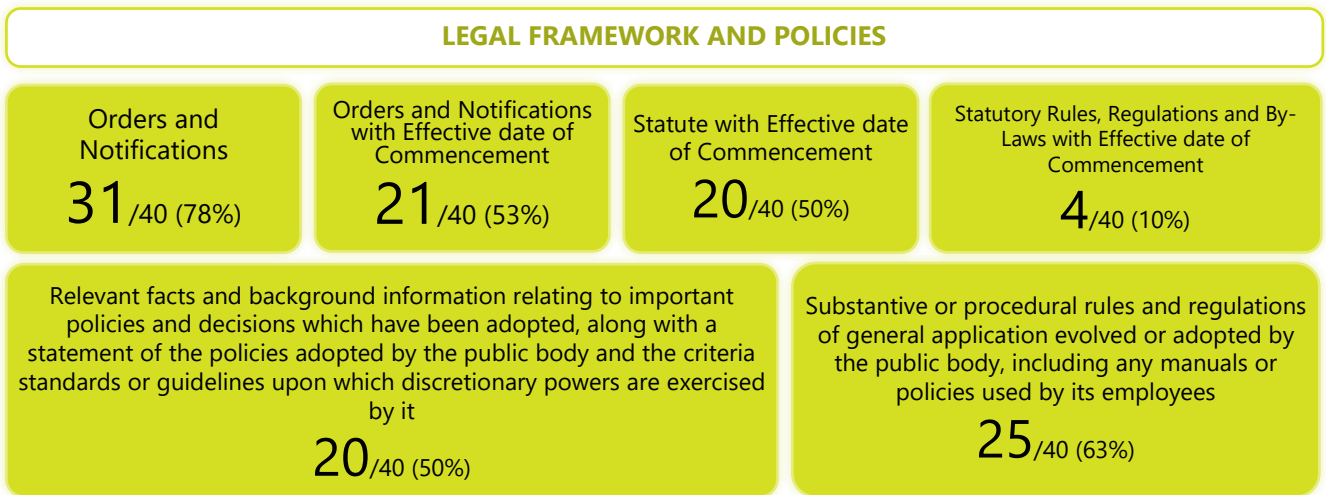

4. Disclosure of Legal Framework and Policies

Section 5(b) to 5(e) of the Right of Access to Information Act, 2017 require all public bodies to ensure transparency by providing information on their statutes, statutory/procedural rules, regulations, by-laws, manuals, policies and their background information, orders, and notifications. This includes disclosing their date of commencement or effect.

The availability of information across the websites of federal ministries varies significantly. As many as 31 divisions (78%) provided orders and notifications on their websites, while 21 (53%) divisions have included orders and notifications with the effective date of their commencement. Similarly, 20 (50%) have published their statutes with the effective dates of commencement, while 30 divisions (75%) have shared the statutory rules, regulations, and by-laws with effective dates of commencement. When it comes to transparency on policies, 20 (50%) divisions have disclosed the relevant facts and background information relating to important policies and decisions, along with the adopted policies and criteria guiding the exercise of discretionary powers on their websites.

Lastly, 25 (63%) divisions have made available substantive or procedural rules and regulations of general application, including any manuals or policies.

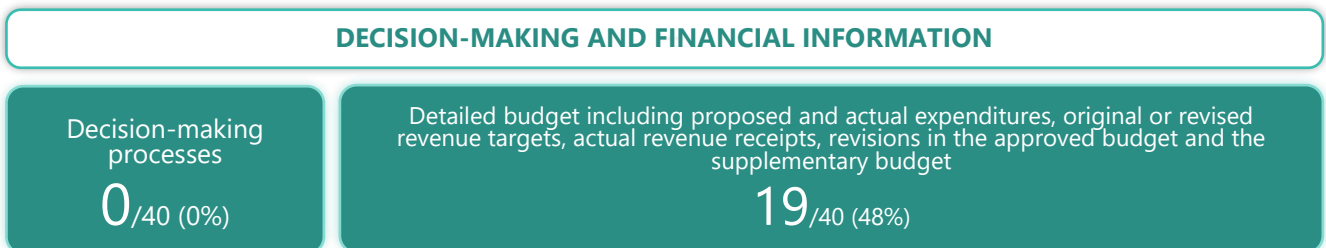

For the compliance checklist on this category, refer to Annexure 5.

5. Disclosure of Decision-Making and Financial Information

Section 5(g) to 5(g) of the Right of Access to Information Act, 2017 mandate that public bodies regularly update their websites with information about their decision making processes and financial matters. The assessment found that none of the divisions have disclosed information regarding decision-making processes.

However, the financial details are varyingly available as 19 out of 40 divisions have made this disclosure on their websites. For the compliance checklist on this category, refer to Annexure 6.

6. Disclosure of Procedure for Accessing Information

The method of obtaining information from a public body is one of the key aspects to exercise the rights of access to information as outlined in Section 5(h) of the Right of Access to Information Act, 2017. The assessment revealed that only nine divisions have described the method and shared the details of the respective focal points for obtaining information, while the remaining 31 divisions have not provided such information.

For the compliance checklist on this category, refer to Annexure 7.

ACCESS TO INFORMATION

The methods whereby information in the possession or control of the public body may be obtained and the prescribed fee required along with the name, title and contact details of the designated officials

9/40 (23%)

7. Disclosure of Reports and Investigations

Section 5(i) of the Right of Access to Information Act, 2017 requires the public bodies to ensure transparency by publishing performance reports, audits, evaluations, investigations, inquiries and other documents available on their websites. The assessment revealed that as many as 11 divisions have made these documents available to the public.

For the compliance checklist on this category, refer to Annexure 8.

REPORTS AND INVESTIGATIONS

Reports including performance reports, inquiry or investigation been finalized

11/40 (28%)

8. Response to RTI Requests

Section 14 of the Right of Access to Information Act, 2017 mandates that public bodies provide requested information to applicants within 10 working days of the receiving a request. In April 2024, FAFEN made information requests to 33 federal ministries, where as many as 19 ministries provided the requested information, while 14 ministries did not provide any information (see Annexure-9 for details). Among the ministries that responded, only nine (27%) provided the requested information within the stipulated 10 working days, while 10 (30%) provided the information after the legally-required timeframe.

Ministries such as Climate Change, Commerce, and Defence Production adhered to the response timeframe. However, ministries including Finance and Revenue, Interior, and Railways failed to provide any response within or beyond the legal timeframe.
